Texting. It’s not just for friends and family anymore. It is fast, familiar, and convenient, so it’s no surprise that today’s customers want to do business through text messaging too. With Ruby, you can use the phone you already have to receive and send texts from your business number, giving you more ways to engage with your existing customers and win new ones.

Get started with Ruby today and connect with your customers, no matter what communication channel they prefer.

Never miss an opportunity.

You know it’s important to quickly respond to your leads and customers alike. Leave them waiting too long and they might take their business elsewhere. Even so, you can’t always stop what you’re doing to return calls. Texting gives you another way to reach out when a phone call isn’t an option, helping you keep your clientele informed and happy.

Stay ahead of the competition.

Research shows that many consumers, particularly younger people, prefer to text because they find it more convenient and less distracting than a phone call. By bringing texting into your business communication strategy you’ll gain access to those individuals in ways that your competitors may not.

Keep your personal number private.

You’ll never have to share your direct cell number with your business contacts, unless you want to. All text communication to and from your business number happens in the Ruby app, giving you the complete control to separate your personal and business communication channels.

Save money. Ditch the second cell phone.

Are you carrying around an extra phone all day, just so you can text and make business calls? Save yourself the hassle and monthly phone bill! Get started with Ruby where you’ll get a business phone AND live receptionist time. No other phone provider has your back like Ruby.
